

Is Now The Time

To Make a Move?

If your parents are ready to sell their home but the new senior housing developments don't quite fit their budget, there may be a better solution . . .

An Accessory Living Unit commonly known as an In-Law Apartment.

Multi-generations all living under one roof is becoming a popular trend. This situation is not only the best scenario for all family members financially, but also can make life more convenient in a variety of ways, both for the older and younger members of the family.

Most senior citizens can realize a substantial profit in the sale of their homes. After the cost of construction of the in-law apartment, most will still have money left to supplement their income.

So if you've been wondering if now is the time to make a move --- give us a call today.

With 20 years in the construction business, we can guide you through the planning, design, and construction of your home renovation project.
